Expertise in WOMEN SAFETY

We get it! We're everyday women, just like you, who stumbled into the self-defense world as adults and simply fell in love with how powerful the knowledge and training made us feel. That's what motivated us to dedicate our lives to teaching what we know to other women; and it's exactly what we work to make sure our students achieve from working with us: a refreshed and powerful sense of confidence, worthiness, and awesomeness. We don't give you personal power, it's already in you! Our job is to help you reconnect to it, or to strengthen and hone it if you're well on your personal power path. We're here to educate and to coach you, but more importantly, to support you in the way that's best for you.

First as students of the Israeli self-defense system of Krav Maga, Karate , Grappling, Mix Martial Arts and then as educators and coaches of self-defense. We recognized the huge impact that our training had on our lives and felt a calling to help other women experience the same type of transformative experiences. For years we built our businesses around empowering women, offering an alternative to the very formal traditional martial arts, the uber-aggressive military approach of many reality-based self-defense systems, and the overtly feminized bedazzled, sparkly, and pink women-only programs. From day one we offered opportunities for real women, just like us, to learn the essentials of protecting themselves and their families while having fun and connecting with other like-minded ladies. For most women (ourselves included) the thought of having to defend themselves or their family members against someone who wants to do them harm is one of the scariest things they can imagine. We promise to never minimize that fear. We promise to never judge that fear. We promise to be open, honest, and up-front about our own experiences with that fear. We promise to provide content and training environments that are positive.

Women in Executive protection

Executive protection is a man's world. But that's changed for other fields and it's changing for EP, too. Seam risk is proud of the fact that we are one of the few companies which has the capabilities of providing highly trained and experienced women for Executive protection. It is our core belief that women are equally capable of doing this job and we have broken the stereotype which says that that protection is best provided by burly men in black. From a protective point of view, women have another important advantage: we blend in better. We also house the depth and capabilities to provide female security officers for various business and corporate houses.

Many of our client want security, but they're not into broadcasting that they've got it or putting up obvious barriers between themselves and the people they meet in their travels. Many times people have assumed that women EP are client's PA or nanny and that is fine with us. In addition to the tactical advantage this allows, it diminishes the whole spectacle of protection and lets the principal get on with her or his life the way they like. Women can easily go where men can't, including dressing rooms and bathrooms and if the principal is a female, this clearly can matter from a security point of view.

We believe that no matter what your gender, there's a lot to love about working in EP.

You're constantly challenged both mentally and physically, and that keeps you sharp. You have the chance to apply the skills and knowledge as no two days are the same.

No matter what your gender, what's really important regarding job satisfaction is the quality of your team.

VIP Protection

Strikes, political unrest, community protests, crime ... and so the list goes on. These are all factors that add to the risk portfolios of executives, travelers, entertainers and your own family. Seam group provides specialist VIP protection services. Our highly trained and experienced Close Protection Officers (CPO's) are deployed to assignments. Our members operate on a principle of 'always present but seldom noticed'. The image of a 'bodyguard' wearing a dark suit and black sunglasses does not sit well with the men and women of our protection teams. These absolute professionals firmly believe that the criteria for successful VIP protection is based on solid planning – advanced preparations, route reconnaissance, threat assessments and conflict avoidance.

With 20 years of executive protection experience, we have learnt that our clients value discreet, well managed protection over robust, overbearing 'bodyguards'. Our VIP Protection services provide a holistic approach to close protection. Essentially, this means that every conceivable aspect that could or would impact on the health, wealth, reputation and safety of our client (principal), is dealt with in a suitable manner. Transportation, routes and destinations are carefully analyzed and all conceivable risks are identified and adequate plans are made and put in place. Residential and hotel security is considered and, where needed, the principal is advised. It is important to point out that 'bodyguarding' is, in fact, a very loose term used to describe a practitioner. However, CPO's operate on many different levels. In a professional environment, CPO's develop their skills in areas of preferred expertise. Essentially, this would mean that no one 'bodyguard' is an absolute expert in all the levels/fields of close, personal protection. We categorize our CPO's into specific operational groups based on the CPO's actual field of expertise.
